

INTRODUCING THE TRUST

The J R McKenzie Trust was established in 1940 by John Robert McKenzie, the founder of the "McKenzie's" chain of department stores. From the time the company started in 1910 until it was sold in 1980, one third of the profits were placed in the Trust for the benefit of the people of New Zealand.

The Trust's goal is to improve the quality of life of New Zealanders who have special needs, or who face disadvantage. The focus is on social, health and developmental needs, especially but not only for children, young people, and people with disabilities.

The Trust makes grants to charitable community organisations that work in these areas. It supports existing services, and also innovative approaches to meeting needs and preventing problems. Grants are made for operating costs; to assist organisations to improve their skills and systems; and to encourage groups to work together. More details can be found in the Financial Report on page 16.

THE TRUST BOARD

The community support started by Sir John has been continued by his son Sir Roy McKenzie, and his grandsons Peter and John. Sir Roy and John are the Personal Trustees.

The Board is assisted by people within the Rotary movement throughout New Zealand. District committees of Rotarians assess local applications, and the Chairs of these committees are Board members.

Other Board members are nominated or appointed because of their knowledge of the community health and social sector.

BUSINESS AS USUAL: SUPPORTING INNOVATION

n this calendar year, the Trust's activity has concentrated mainly in three areas. The first of these, "business as usual", has been busy as usual! We've processed about the usual number of applications – well over 700, plus many more inquiries. We've sought to assist organisations with both their operating costs and also to improve their skills and systems, so that they work more effectively.

Because our funds were limited, we've reluctantly had to turn down lots of groups that we wanted to support, and make many grants smaller than we would have liked.

Secondly, we have continued an increased emphasis on supporting innovation – both community initiatives that address social issues in new ways, and new approaches to grant making. Independent grant makers have the opportunity to take part in initiatives – but also the responsibility to do so with a long term view.

Some of our changed approaches cannot be seen in the list of grants. For example, we have contracted Jean Mitaera to run a series of workshops for Pacific groups around developing their management and governance skills, complementing our Building Pacific Organisations programme. We have undertaken a small but increased number of multi-year commitments to organisations. Currently we are preparing a funding programme in the refugee resettlement area.

The third major focus of the Board's time has been the review of the Trust Deed, written 61 years ago and amended several times since. The Deed was founded as an Act of Parliament, and the review process has been complex. Hopefully we are on the home straight now.

Beyond that, the Trust has continued to take an interest in the "big picture" development of the community and voluntary sector. A report on the progress of work supported through our "60th Anniversary Fund" last year appears on page 7. We are very pleased that the Government is also committed to improving its support for the sector.

The Trust's website has attracted favourable comment and for many is a great way of getting information

In 2001, special and overdue recognition is being made of volunteers. We too greatly admire and appreciate the voluntary effort that holds together so many community organisations that work to improve the lives of New Zealanders. Among their number are the members of the Rotary district teams that assist the Trust; the Building Pacific Organisations panel; and the JR McKenzie Trust Board itself. In fact, our organisation has only two people who are not volunteers! Thanks also to the many others who help us with information and advice – you know who you are!

Particular thanks are due to Jenny Gill, who so ably chaired the Trust during my absence last year.

Another network of volunteers that contribute with very little acknowledgement are the Rotarians who distribute the J R McKenzie Youth Education Fund to help low income families met basic education-related costs.

We are very pleased to have continued the partnership with the Tindall Foundation on the Building Pacific Organisations programme.

Our best wishes go to everyone, both volunteers and paid workers, as you contribute to improving the quality of in New Zealand.

SPREADING THE WORD ABOUT BENEFIT ENTITLEMENTS

O ome 150,000 New Zealand children are affected because the benefits that reach their families are less than their entitlement. Three projects aimed at reducing this number include a focus on Special Benefits, which 'top up' other entitlements in cases where reasonable household outgoings exceed income.

PACIFIC ISLAND EMPOWERMENT PROJECT

This project, run by the Auckland-based Combined Beneficiaries Union, aims to improve access to government services and information in the welfare, taxation and ACC areas, for Pacific Island communities. Training and advice is being offered to community groups, to help them develop their own solutions for the problems.

THE BENEFIT FACT FILE

The Benefit Fact File is a plain English legal resource, produced by the Wellington People's Centre, that provides user-friendly information about benefit entitlements. Subscribers include community agencies, government departments and health services. The resource is currently being enlarged, translated and marketed more widely.

"I do not have enough food for my children. If you ask why I did not apply for a Special Benefit earlier I must answer: because we did not know about this type of benefit."

– Jill, mother of three

SPECIAL BENEFIT CAMPAIGN

The Downtown Community Ministry is undertaking a nationwide education and publicity campaign to raise awareness of Special Benefits. While uptake of the benefits is rising after recent policy changes, the Ministry believes that an independent campaign will help beneficiaries who have had difficulty accessing this assistance from DWI, and working families with whom the Department has no contact.

RESETTLEMENT FOR REFUGEES

Somali refugees have been arriving in Christchurch since 1993. Resettlement poses many challenges, especially for those who lack the means and mechanisms to make the difficult adjustment to a new country with a vastly different culture.

To facilitate the resettlement process, a group of Somali women formed the Canterbury Somali Women Empowerment Trust in 1999. The outcomes pursued by the trust include:

- Increased solidarity and support among women refugees
- Increased access to education, employment and welfare services
- · Increased participation in society
- Empowerment of Somali women to gain control over their lives
- Teaching, promoting and honouring the Somalia culture
- Participation in multicultural activities in order to promote unity, goodwill and social harmony with other ethnic communities in Christchurch and Canterbury.

Programmes previously implemented by the trust include awareness-raising training, literacy and numeracy training, study support programmes for intermediate and secondary students, and school holiday programmes. The trust currently runs a study support centre, supported by PEETO, the Ministry of Education and Christchurch City Council, and operates an organisational capacity building programme, supported by J R McKenzie Trust. There is a strong focus on women's role in promoting family literacy and community support.

Priority is given to programmes that provide education, access to social services, sports activities and help with orientation to New Zealand life, and that revitalise Somali culture.

AGENDER NEW ZEALAND

SAFETY, SUPPORT AND ACCEPTANCE FOR TRANSGENDERED PEOPLE

"With Agender's support,
I started my journey for the truth that would ultimately set me free." (Tauranga)

Transsexuals, cross-dressers, inand other transgendered people have historically faced prejudice, misunderstanding and sometimes outright hatred, according to Agender New Zealand Inc. Transgendered people, they say, often lead difficult and solitary lives as they come to terms with their identity.

Agender aims not only to support transgendered people æ and anyone who has gender or gender identity issues æ but also to promote public understanding of them. The organisation, run by transgendered people and their partners, has branches in Wellington, Christchurch, Auckland, Hamilton and Tauranga that provide safe places for transgendered people to meet, exchange information and gain whatever support they may need. There are active members in many other centres around the country. Agender also seeks contacts with other community organisations, as many transgendered people face a range of difficulties in addition to being transgendered.

Agender is also a lobby group. It has, among other activities, promoted the protection of transgendered people under the Human Rights Act, and lobbied the Corrections Department to develop policies to ensure the safety of transgendered people prisons.

"Agender has created a depth to our relationship we never dreamed of or would have dared to think possible." (Christchurch)

"I would like to say how pleased I am with the establishment of Agender, as it fulfills a real need." (Auckland) "Thank you both for helping us to open

YOU CAN'T BEAT KIDS: IMPROVING BEHAVIOUR WITHOUT PHYSICAL PUNISHMENT

POCH New Zealand is a charitable trust that aims to stop the use of physical punishment of children. Much of the trust's work is designed to educate parents and caregivers about not using physical punishment with children, and about using more effective ways of guiding children to behave well. Epoch is part of a worldwide federation with a similar aim.

The trust works in several ways. Information is promulgated through the media and in presentations at public forums, and the Government is lobbied for legal reform. Over the last year, trustees have presented papers at the Children's Issues Centre Conference, the Public Health Association Conference and other gatherings.

Epoch has gained the support of many of agencies that provide services for children and families, and that lobby for the rights and interests of children.

Epoch's two main support resources are a parent information kit, Children are Unbeatable: Ways to Avoid Smacking, and a pack entitled You can't beat kids. The pack contains a fridge magnet, some stickers, and simple information about avoiding smacking. Both resources have been very popular æ over 7000 copies of the pack have been distributed free of charge. The parent information kit has recently been re-edited in response to feedback, and was published in a new format in October 2001, in partnership with the Office of the Com-

SOCIAL SERVICES RELATIONSHIP PROJECT

BETTER CO-OPERATION IN THE SOCIAL SERVICES SECTOR

The Social Services Relationship Project was initiated in 2000 by the three social services umbrella groups. They felt it was important that consultation managed and funded from within the sector should fit alongside the Government initiative of the Community and Voluntary Sector Working Party. The project was designed to find ways of strengthening and supporting the social services sector within New Zealand, and to look at the types of relationships existing within the sector and with government.

The umbrella groups involved were the New Zealand Council of Social Services whose many member councils around the country provide the "glue" at a local level; the Federation of Voluntary Welfare Organisations with a membership of a variety of national and local organisations; and the New Zealand Council of Christian Social Services, representing the six major church based social service organisations and networks.

"Meetings with sector groups had revealed concern about the impact of the competitive environments of the last decade on relationships between agencies, between different levels of government and between people," says project manager Carolyn Wait. "People also felt unsafe when talking about issues relating to Maori and the call for sovereignty. They wanted to collaborate rather than compete, and to be able to talk openly about common issues.

"Through collaborating, the three umbrella groups have been able to be far more active than they could by going it alone. They are now working on a framework for co-operation to provide the basis for a robust, sustainable and effective neans of working together."

Some laughter usually helps.

SUPPORT FOR SUFFERERS OF A PARALYSING DISEASE

Guillain Barre Syndrome usually starts with tingling in the fingers or toes, and is followed by weakness in the leg and arm muscles. It can paralyse the entire body, so that full life support is required. The condition affects the peripheral nerves (but not the central nervous system) and can strike anyone, anytime, anywhere. It affects one or two people per 100,000 each year.

"The disease struck my sister in 1997," says Trust secretary Jenny Murray. "She went from a tingling in her thumb to full life support in four or five days at which time a lumbar puncture was done and GBS was diagnosed. She remained completely paralysed and on life support for about five weeks in the Intensive Care Unit, with only the power to open and close one eye.

"Slowly she improved, came off the life support and began recovering. She was hospitalized for five months in total, and, following intensive physiotherapy and good nursing, she recovered to be almost back to normal within a year. She still has residual problems with her feet but she can drive a car, look after herself and run her own home.

"The support group was started to support sufferers and to get information out to patients and families alike. It is a frightening illness, especially if the illness progresses to the extent that my sister's did. Not everyone is so severely affected, and there are variants of GBS. Most variants, including GBS itself, leave some residual effect, but generally the prognosis is good once the disease is diagnosed."

The Guillain Barre Syndrome Support Group has a quarterly newsletter and tries to contact each person who is diagnosed with the condition, to offer support, handbooks, an information video and information sheets. The Trust, which is in touch with 325 sufferers,

FAMILY FOCUS SERVICES, GREYMOUTH

SUPPORT FOR BETTER PARENTING

M any families today face complex and difficult problems and require help with parenting, budgeting and achieving their goals, according to Family Focus Services manager Henk Kaspars.

"Raising a family does not come with instructions like when buying a new washing machine," says Henk. "Many families find themselves ill-prepared when problems come up, and reaching out for assistance is not always easy to do. Personal and professional help is often available only at a cost, something many today can ill afford."

Family Focus Services has a range of programmes designed to help families. Parenting courses help parents to improve their skills and explore options in parenting styles, often focusing on particular needs such as parenting teenagers or toddlers, or parenting for fathers. Afterschool programmes, known as 5-10 Clubs, offer activities for improving confidence, self-esteem and social skills. Free and confidential budget help is available, as is counselling by qualified counsellors.

"Our support staff are ordinary, down to earth people who have life experience themselves and have undertaken training to help others to meet their needs," says Henk. "The bottom line is that we assist people to achieve their own goals. We go to people's homes and start with the basics æ a listening ear and a willingness to help. This is time-consuming but helps people feel at ease and allows support workers to get a better idea of the person's home situation. We are currently working on ways to bring the parenting programme into the home, and to widen families' support networks æ not least because youth suicide is related to a lack of support networks."

Family Focus Services measure their results through their goal-setting procedures, and by monitoring the number of families that develop the ability to function successfully as they become independent.

COMING TO GRIPS WITH PROBLEM GAMBLING

The Problem Gambling Foundation aims to reduce the harm to communities that arises from excessive gambling.

Over 90% of adult New Zealanders gamble and some 80,000 people have a gambling problem. Each problem gambler affects seven other people, on average. The problem is growing as the number of 'mini-casinos' and video gambling machines continues to rise. The nation now has more gambling machines, relative to population size, than almost any other country.

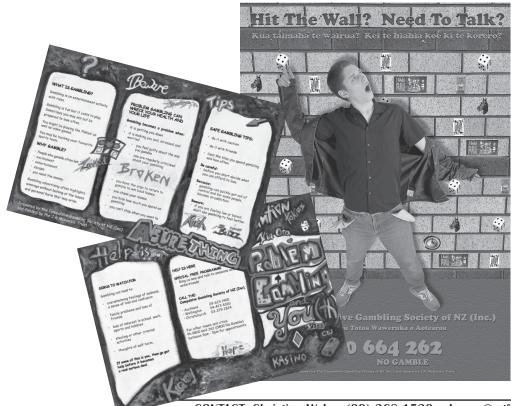

People are more likely to develop gambling problems if they are young, Maori, Pacific Nationals, and/or from lower socio-economic communities. Increasing numbers of women have problems, and most Maori people who seek help are female. Other groups, such as Asians and older people, may have serious gambling problems but are less likely to seek help.

The Foundation – which does not oppose gambling – tackles problem gambling through health promotion, prevention, early intervention, advocacy, advice, information, individual and family counselling, and other strategies. The aim is to raise awareness, and improve the coping skills and resilience of those at risk.

An Asian specialist service has begun working with the Chinese community in Auckland and will soon start up in Christchurch. Counselling is provided in the Mandarin, Cantonese and Korean languages, especially for new migrants.

SPINZ - YOUTH SUICIDE PREVENTION INFORMATION NEW ZEALAND

HELPING COMMUNITIES TO PREVENT YOUTH SUICIDE

The organisers of the SPINZ project believe in working alongside people who work with young people to inform their work in dealing with crisis, recognising warning signs, and importantly, in promoting youth well-being. The project is a joint initiative of the Mental Health Foundation of New Zealand and the Centre for Youth Health.

Project teams are running workshops for community groups in regions such as Otago and Southland. The workshops use the Youth Suicide Prevention Community_Information Kit (developed for the Ministry of Youth Affairs) that includes information on healthy youth development, connecting with young people, warning signs, effective ways to help when faced with a crisis, bereavement and taking preventive action to prevent further harm after a suicide. Workshop participants are helped to identify local needs, plan local initiatives and compile information directories. Project teams continue to support the participants.

Initial workshops are held in five townships within each region, followed by two more workshops held over the following year. For example, SPINZ has appointed a SPINZ South Community Liaison Coordinator, Freedom Preston-Clark, who is running workshops in Christchurch, Gore, Oamaru, Alexandra and Invercargill. Community liaison meetings in Dunedin and Invercargill attracted 72 participants.

Many organisations take part in the workshops, including government and non-government agencies, iwi, hapu and whanau collectives, community health and welfare networks, etc. SPINZ also liaises with Police, ALAC, city councils, researchers, hospitals, schools, training providers and other organisations.

The Mental Health Foundation works to improve the mental health of all New Zealanders. Major initiatives, in addition to SPINZ, include:

- a national resource and information centre (in Mount Eden, Auckland)
- a website with news and information about mental health disorders, treatment options and support services workshops for caregivers, community workers, counsellors,

CHANGING THE LIVES OF YOUNG WOMEN AT RISK

Te Marama Taka Hou (Season for Change) is a community organisation based in Palmerston North that runs programmes for 'at risk' young women aged 14 to 18 years.

The programmes aim to empower young women to change dysfunctional attitudes and behaviours, and to develop positive personal outlooks for the future. Many issues are covered, including sexual abuse, family violence, neglect, selfesteem, social skills and other personal issues. Life-skills and outdoor education components are included.

The majority of participants are referred by high schools, the Police Youth Aid Section, and Child, Youth and Family Services. Feedback indicates that the programmes can indeed change lives. For example:

- "The Course had an outstandingly beneficial effect on the student, whose reaction to disagreement was to hit, and who was used as an enforcer by others. When she came back to school she unfailing kept to seeking advice whenever she got angry, thus avoiding aggression. The entire staff was deeply impressed by the real change effected." school guidance counsellor
- "Police Youth Aid Section have referred a significant number of young women in the 14 to 17 year age range to this course, and have found it to have an impact on those who attend. Many of the women do not come to further police notice after graduating the course." Police Youth Aid Section

The programme has also been evaluated by Massey University. Based on her work and the experience of Te Marama Taka Hou, the evaluator made a number of suggestions that might be useful for other small, grass roots programmes.

THE MIRROR YOUTH DAY PROGRAMME

HELPING YOUNG PEOPLE DEVELOP SKILLS AND MAKE BETTER LIFE CHOICES

The Mirror Youth Day Programme is for young people aged 13-17 years living in Otago and Southland, who have moderate to severe alcohol and drug issues. The programme, based in Dunedin, runs five days a week for ten weeks, with the option of continuing.

The programme provides young people with an opportunity to explore the problems they face in their life and assist them in making positive choices so they can manage their lives safely and productively. The focus is on harm reduction and behaviour modification, through therapy – group, individual, creative and adventure – and through the involvement of family and whanau. The programme content includes goal setting, alcohol and drug education, effective communication, healthy decision making, recognising and dealing with anger, life education, adventure based learning, camps, family/whanau meals, creative workshops, vocational assistance, school-based education and ongoing support. Young people are encouraged to develop a sense of personal and cultural identity.

Progress is monitored by feedback from clients, family/whanau, and referral agencies, and is reviewed throughout the programme. A number of young people have graduated from the programme having successfully reduced or ceased alcohol and/or drug use. In addition young people have improved self-concept, greater respect for themselves and others, and re-established and/or improved family/whanau relationships. A number have gone on to further education, vocational training and full-time employment. Most notably, young people on the programme are developing a sease

HELPING TONGAN YOUTH TO STAND TALL

ongan youth in Auckland face a number of problems, according to Ikilifi Pope of To'utupu Tonga Trust, or the Tongan Youth Trust. "Many of our young people are not very successful in education. They are caught between two cultures and can end up on wrong track, especially during school holidays. They may lack proper support when facing issues of misbehaviour, drugs and alcohol, and road safety. The Trust aims to help with these challenges, and to help the young Tongan people of Auckland to stand tall and to settle effectively in their adopted country."

Projects organised by the Trust include the establishment of support groups for Tongan students, literacy support for primary school children, homework centres, the Tonga Club project, and programmes designed to foster cultural identity, support at-risk youth, prevent drug and alcohol problems, promote road safety, and encourage sport.

"We are proud of what we have been able to do," said Ikilifi. "We don't have the funds to employ the number of staff we need, but we are still able to cater for between 1150 and 2500 Tongan children and young people with different projects and services. We are at a stage when the Tongan community of Auckland really supports our services, and we are recognised by organisations like City Councils, Community Employment Group and Lottery Youth.

VINCENTS ART WORKSHOP

ARTS ACTIVITIES FOR EVERYONE'S MENTAL HEALTH

Vincents is an award-winning arts and crafts workshop in Wellington that offers a supportive environment for all people, including those with mental health issues. Activities foster well-being, self-esteem and a sense of belonging, not only through creative expression, but also by encouraging participants to be involved in community arts events and the management of the workshop.

The workshop provides an art space with equipment and tuition. Participants also help to run the organisation: over half of the Management Committee are participants, and all participants contribute to policy and operating decisions. The organisation believes that all people have a right to creative expression, and that one's own creativity is to be nurtured. Involvement often leads participants into training and employment.

Participants often produce work for public events, including the Cuba Street Carnival, stage productions and exhibitions. Vincents featured in a documentary, Take Three Artists, screened on TV1, and has won three awards during the last two years: the National Community Mental Health Award for Community Integration, an Innovative Provider Award from the Adult and Community Education Association Aotearoa New Zealand and the Trust wer Wellington

FINANCIAL REPORT FOR THE YEAR ENDING 31 MARCH 2001

Grants made this year totalled $2.4 million – an increase from $1.9 million in the previous year.

There were 746 applications and 503 grants. Regional grants averaged $2,600 and national grants $10,500. Grants ranged in size from $400, to $155,000 for the J R McKenzie Youth Education Fund.

The Trust made grants to organisations assisting a wide range of people:

Two thirds of grants assisted with core operating costs, including salaries, rent, volunteer costs etc. Organisations working specifically for and with Maori received about 4% of grants, as did Pacific Island groups. 38% of funds went to projects focused on children and youth, but only 3% went towards senior citizens.

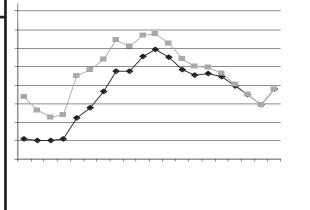

National organisations received 44% of all grants, and regional organisations 38%. The biggest change from last year was the increase in "innovative grants" – a fund set aside by the Trust specifically to support new approaches to service delivery and grant making; this increased from 5.5% to 16.6% of the total value.

A quarter of all applicant groups were making their first application to the Trust. There are a number of reasons for this surprising, but not unusual figure.

The Trust's administration costs for the year were $169,000. The balance sheet shows total Trust Funds of just under $11 million. A full set of audited accounts is available from the office.

JENNY GILL'S GREAT CONTRIBUTION

In November 2001 Jenny Gill resigned as a Trustee, after serving on the Board for 13 years. Jenny has made a giant contribution to philanthropy in New Zealand. She became known nationally as Executive Officer of the Roy McKenzie Foundation from 1986 to 1994.

Among the organisations and programmes Jenny has helped to initiate are Philanthropy New Zealand; the Funding Information Service; the Voluntary Organisations Management Assistance Grants programme; the Wellington Community Foundation (which she chairs); and Building Pacific Organisations. She also serves on the Projecta Foundation and other bodies.

Jenny is particularly well regarded for her creativity, leadership and extensive knowledge. We are sad to lose her from the Board, but have every intention of using her in the ways!

WHERE DOES THE MONEY COME FROM?

RANGATIRA LIMITED

This investment company was founded Sir John McKenzie in 1937. Rangatira's initial investment was a majority interest in J R McKenzie Limited, a New Zealand-wide chain of department stores. Over the years, Sir John and other family members have gifted shares in Rangatira to the J R McKenzie Youth Education Fund, the J R McKenzie Trust and other charities; today charitable bodies hold over 60% of the issued share capital.

Rangatira has a policy of investing in a range of listed companies, as well as unlisted New Zealand companies with growth potential. Today Rangatira is in a strong financial position, with shareholders' funds of $78 million, minimal indebtedness and substantial liquid funds available for investment.

Rangatira's directors are prominent in the business world. The Chair is Norman Geary, CBE.

In 2000-01 the Trust received almost $3 million from Rangatira Limited.

JAYAR CHARITABLE TRUST

The Jayar Charitable Trust arose from the winding up of the Perpetual Trustees Estate and Agency Company of New Zealand, an investment body. The company's remaining assets were invested in a charitable trust which was given the name Jayar after a racehorse from the McKenzie family's Roydon Lodge stud.

Jayar has assets totalling $7 million. Its Chairperson is Peter McKenzie.

The Trust has very similar goals to those of the J R McKenzie Trust, to which it makes donations; these are passed on to community organisations through the McKenzie Trust distribution process. (This does not require a separate application.) Jayar's 2000-01 donation was $240,000.

The Jayar Trust is also able to receive donations or bequests.

SIR JOHN AND LADY MCKENZIE

Iti noa ana, he pito mata.

With care, a small kumara will produce a harvest.
